Dear Allan,

It is no idle phrase when I tell you that your letter has touched me profoundly. The last difficult years have been immeasurably worth while if they have brought me the gift of your affection & your esteem and the knowledge that your sympathy and understanding will be available in the years to come, is the best guarantee for the future that I can ask no matter what particular trials I may be shoved into. I'm ready for any thing! I can't say any thing more.

Yours
