Salishan Texts.(Read before the American Philosophical Society, March 1, 1895.)By Franz Boas.

The following texts were collected in the winter of 1886-87 on the coast of British Columbia. As the languages which they represent are very little known, and as I do not see any prospect of adding in the near future to the material which I now possess, I consider it best to present the same as a slight contribution to our knowledge of the languages of the North Pacific Coast. Heretofore only brief vocabularies of these languages have been published. I have given grammatical notes on a few of them (Proceedings of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, 1891), but no texts which give the best insight into the structure of a language have been made known.

After some hesitation, I have decided to make a few changes in the alphabet applied for recording these languages. Unfortunately the limited facilities of the printing offices deny us the use of diacritical marks, so that a systematic phonetic alphabet is out of the question. After several years of use I have found the alphabet which I applied heretofore not sufficient for the needs of the phonology of the languages of the North Pacific Coast. I have, therefore, adopted the following scheme :

- a, e, i, o, u have their continental sounds.
- ɛ, obscure e, as in flower.
- â, aw in law.
- ô, o in voll (German).
- l, dorsal l, similar to tl.
- q, velar k.
- k, English k.
- k', anterior k, similar to ky.
- x, velar, as ch in German Bach.
- x', as ch in German ich.
- c, English sh.
- y, as in year.
- ! denotes increased stress of articulation.

BILXULA.

This language is spoken on Bentinck Arm and Deans Inlet, on the coast of British Columbia. It represents the farthest northwestern offshoot of the Salishan stock. The texts are fragmentary and indifferent versions of myths. Nos. 1 to 7 were told by a number of young women of the village of Sâtsq on Deans Inlet, the dialect of which differs slightly from that of Nuxa'lk'. The last tale was obtained from Nusk'e-lu'sta, a young man from Nuxa'lk'.

Translation.

A man and his wife were in their house. Their child was crying. Then a Snēnē'iq came and wanted to shoot the child. Then the man (whose name was Iā'lit) shot the Snēnē'iq and killed him. He dug a hole in the ground and buried him. When the young Snēnē'iq did not return his father went down the river and cried. He sat down and cried. The people who went up the river saw him. They became afraid and returned home. Then Iā'lit went up the river and sat down with the Snēnē'iq and bewailed with him his lost child. When they stopped the Snēnē'iq said to Iā'lit: "My dear, I desired to cry with you. I do not know where my child is. It may be it is dead. I will give you my child's copper and you shall be a chief in his place. Do you see my son's house. There it is." Iā'lit replied: "I do not see it." "I will rub over your eyes, then you will see my son's house." "Now I see your son's house." "I will give you my son's house, and you will be a chief. Four times you shall build a house. Now I will leave this country and go to Naus." Iā'lit found Snēnē'iq's house and carried it down the river. The house was on top of the mountain.

Translation.

The wife of Wā'walis and her child were staying in the house. She desired to have seal flippers to eat. One of Wā'walis' men was her lover. Wā'walis went hunting and his young slave steered his canoe. He went to shoot many seals. He shot a young seal, which he cut up and boiled and covered with a mat. When it was dark he landed near his house. He pushed his canoe into the water. He wanted to watch his wife and her lover. At midnight he arrived at the beach in front of the town. He pointed his baton towards the town. Then the people fell asleep. Wā'walis' man slept with her in the house of her father. Wā'walis went to the head part of her bed and scratched at the wall. His wife said: "I wish (that mouse) would gnaw Wā'walis' stomach." Wā'walis grew angry. He stretched out his baton and the woman fell asleep. She slept with her lover. Then Wā'walis came and entered the house. He cut off the head of the man. Then he went out of the house and took the head of the man along. He went far away and put the head into a basket. He covered it with seal meat.

Wā'walis' child cried. The bed of the child was full of the blood of the beheaded lover of Wā'walis' wife. She washed the child and the bed and the child went to sleep again. Then she wrapped up her lover and carried him out of her bed and out of the house. She covered him.

(On the next morning) the mother of the young man arose (and told) his younger brothers to wake him. (They called him, but he did not stir.) "Why don't you uncover him?" The oldest one went and uncovered him. He cried: "O, my dear, he has no head!" The youth cried and the people assembled. "Oh, Wā'walis' man has no head." Now all the people of the town had assembled. Then Wā'walis came paddling. (They cried:) "Put your paddles down, Wā'walis! One of your men was (found) without head when the sun rose this morning." Wā'walis arrived, carrying the basket, in which he brought food for his wife. "Come! take the basket and feed our people" (he said). She took the basket: "Is it this (what you want to give me?" she asked). "No, what you like to have is below." Then she saw the head of her lover. "Why do you cry on seeing this?" Wā'walis took his child. He took his copper and his baton and went into his canoe. The people of the town pursued him. They wanted to kill him. They came nearer. When they were near him he pointed his baton at them and his pursuers were dead. He paddled on the fjord towards the sea. They did not reach Wā'walis.

(Soon) Wā'walis discovered a town. Smoke was rising from one of the houses only. Nobody was to be seen. He saw a man. Wā'walis wished to marry the daughter of this old, blind man. He took the boiled dried salmon of the old man. The latter could not find his salmon and said to his daughter: "Look back, my dear, somebody must be in the town and is playing with my food." He always said so, and she replied: "Stop! do not talk, my dear!" But then she looked back towards the old man. (She saw the stranger and said :) "You spoke the truth ; a man is near you." Wā'walis said to the old man : "I wish to marry your daughter." "I will give her to him who restores my eyesight." "I want to marry her" (replied Wā'walis). "Where are all the people of your town, my dear?" "When they went to fetch water, that being in the water devoured them, my dear. Are you a shaman?" "Yes, I am a shaman." "Then restore my eyesight." "I shall restore your eyesight." He did so. Then Wā'walis' child wished to have water. He sent his slave after water. Then (the monster) Skyamsky devoured him. Wā'walis went out, pointed his baton at it, and Skyamsky died. He opened its belly (and said): "Come, my dear, and look at your people. I wish to resuscitate them." (The old man said :) "They are not my people. Don't say anything, they will be your slaves. They will be your servants." Wā'walis washed them and healed them. One of them limped (because one of his bones was lost). Wā'walis first washed his slave and healed him. Then he washed those who had been dead long ago. They became slaves of Wā'walis' wife. After he had finished, Wā'walis built four times large houses, and he became a great chief.

Once upon a time Wā'walis' wife went to wash the intestines of a seal. She liked only one kind of food. Then the killer whale came paddling and took her in his canoe. "Wā'walis ! the killer whale took your wife in his canoe." Then Wā'walis said to his slave : "Come, we will follow him and recover my wife." Wā'walis went in his canoe and pursued the killer whale. He stopped. Then he took a rope and the slave let him down. Wā'walis jumped into the water and followed his wife. When he almost reached the bottom of the sea it grew light, and the sun was shining. Wā'walis arrived in a country and saw a stout old man who chopped a tree for fuel. Wā'walis hid in the tree and broke off the point of the (slave's) wedge. The old man cried : anahah. He became angry on account of his wedge. (Wā'walis said :) "Old man, stop crying. If you so desire, I will repair your wedge. Don't you know about a woman whom a man carried away in his canoe, my dear?" "He carried her into the house, where she is sitting near the fire, in the house of the chief. I am going to carry fuel and water into the house. I shall make a fire. You stay behind the post of the house and wait. She will be right there. Then I shall pour the water into the fire. At that time you must go and take your wife." Wā'walis went and took the woman. "Come, rise. I am Wā'walis." She arose (and they went out). The stout man lay down on the threshold of the house (and made himself so big that the killer whale could not leave the house). Wā'walis took his wife along and they returned to their country. Wā'walis was the first to climb up the rope. He shook it and then the woman climbed into the canoe. Only the bones of the slave (whom Wā'walis had left in the canoe) remained. Wā'walis healed him and revived him. Then Wā'walis paddled to their country. They had been away one winter and one summer. The people assembled and he became a great chief in the country of his wife.

The Raven went into his canoe. The chief's daughter brought the load into the canoe. Then he took her (into the canoe) and paddled away. They arrived at (the place where he had left) his younger sisters. The girl's father came and pursued the Raven, but his canoe foundered. The Raven's sisters had gnawed it through. The Raven came to Nuxa'lk'. Then he threw the Salmon's daughter into the water, (and since that time) there are many salmon in the river.

Translation.

A long time ago the sun burnt everything. T'ōtqoa'ya (mythical name of mink) burnt everything. He arose in the morning and went to get fuel. At noon the sun burnt everything and many people died. Many people (jumped into the water and) swam. Then Snx broke the bones of his son, he threw him down (from the sky) and he became a mink.

NOTE.—This refers to the tradition of Mink or T'ōtqoa'ya, who was the son of the sun god (Snx) and of a woman. He was maltreated by men and visited his father in the sky, ascending to heaven in one version on the rays of the sun, Snx's eyelashes; in another version along a chain of arrows which he had made. He carried the sun in his father's place, but disobeyed the instructions of the latter, approaching too near the earth. Then the woods began to burn, the rocks to crack and the water to boil. Snx caught his son, flung him down and transformed him into the mink.

Translation.

Snx had four daughters. The Raven went. (He transformed himself into a) spike, which dropped into the water, (from which) the eldest daughter of Snx used to fetch water. She drank the water and swallowed the spike. She became pregnant and after four days she gave birth to the young Raven. The little Raven wished for the box in which they kept the daylight. [It was dark in the past. There was no sun and it grew daylight when the Raven went up. He wanted to have everything in the past.] He wished to play with the little box of the father. Then Snx said to his child: "He wishes to play with the box." (She gave it to him) and he played with the box. Then the Raven stopped crying and played with the box. (He finally took it out of the house and broke the box. Thus the sun was liberated.)

Translation.

The father (of a youth) brought him always food. Then his stepmother grew angry. When (the father) gave her to eat she threw the food which he had presented to her down. She scolded his son. Then the youth grew angry and left. He (went into the woods) without knowing where he went. He went on and he tried to shoot a bird. His (arrow) hit a Salmon. He heard the Salmon cry. When the youth came to the Salmon the latter said: "Throw me into the water." The youth took him and threw him into the water. The Salmon jumped (but did not swim right). Then the Salmon told the youth to look for one of his bones (which was missing). At first the youth did not find the bone of the nape* of the Salmon, but then he found it. He gave it to him and threw him (again) into the water. Now he was perfect. Then the Salmon came ashore in his canoe. He went down to the canoe. The Salmon told the youth to lie down and to pull his blanket over his head. "Don't uncover your head," said the Salmon "I shall awake you when we come to a town." They went and arrived at the town of the birds t'êx'lala'tx. They went on and arrived at the town of the birds tsutsulē'ttsx. They were singing all the time. The Salmon said: "When you like a country you must tell me." Now he liked this one. They landed and went to the house of the bird. Then they went on and paddled. They arrived at the house of the bird qulexlēlē'ts, and she was a pretty woman. They left and went on. They arrived at a town (where there was) the house of the bird qoqoā'os. They went ashore and the youth went into her house. He said: "She is pretty," and he married her. The Salmon forbade it and said: "Nobody survives who marries the bird qoqoā'os." The youth, however, went to her and lay down. It got day and he arose. He was not dead. They departed for the house of the sqāpts. The latter said: "A stranger landed." Then they went on and came to the fish sāmL. They landed and the youth said: "This is a good country. Here are pretty girls." They avoided the house of the fish t'li. They left her and she laughed. Then the youth and the Salmon said: "They are glad and make merry in this town. They are laughing." They went on and reached the house of the k'apai' salmon. Her town was bad. They went on to the house of the silver salmon and landed. They looked about and the youth and the salmon saw the place where the women went bathing. A man was sitting at the bank of the pond. The youth exchanged cloths with him. Then the girls came and bathed. They went into the water and the youth washed them, but they recognized him. They ran away and cried. They were afraid. Then they returned to the house of the fish sāmL. The youth married her. He thought he had stayed away one night, but it was two seasons. The youth had two children. Now the salmon made his canoe ready and they went to visit the house of the youth's father. They arrived there and found the youth's father sitting at his salmon weir crying. Then the youth pulled the rope and lifted the net. The father recognized his son. He saw him at the salmon weir. Then all the people came to the house of the old man. The youth told him to clean it. Then he entered the house of his father, and he related to all of them: "The salmon desires to have cedarbark." It is said that the salmon eat it. (He stayed there with his wife and his children.) Then the (other) children quarreled and fought with them. Then she grew angry and deserted her husband.

Translation.

(Two brothers built) a hut for hunting (birds) on a river. They shot birds. One of them wished to go up to see the sun. (When he reached the sky) he saw ducks. He found something supernatural. (The ducks were blind.) He cured them by spitting on their eyes. Then they regained their eyesight. They called him Smōq'oa'ns. He returned and his younger brother saw him. He went and told their father: "I saw my elder brother." "Why do you tell such lies," replied the father. "I speak the truth." "Then call him." "He says he will not come. He does not want to enter a dirty room. He will come and enter when it is clean." The father invited the people and they cleaned the house. The people washed themselves. When they were ready he came. He entered. He informed them how he had found a supernatural helper. He wished to show his power to them and killed many ducks by the aid of his supernatural helper, and he gave the meat to the people of his town. That is all. Then he wished to return to the sun. His younger brother cried and wished to accompany him, but he did not want him to go. He left him and did not return. He became a supernatural being. He threw down birds and made us Indians happy.
