Dear Alex

I don't know if Alza is already into this, but I thought I should call your attention to some possibilities for further technology in trace-metal controlled release. It is quite a problem in the fermentation industries as you may imagine (see attached pages from Hutter's review) but probably has a vast market in agriculture (fertilizers) and some in animal ~~and~~ and human nutrition (of the cobalt-pellets given to cattle in Australia; still difficult problems of restoring Fe in man.)

Best wishes,
John.
