Dear Gan:

Your manuscript is going off by manuscript airmail. It is basically sound and we can polish it better in twenty minutes discussion than in a month of correspondence. I hope you are finding some constructive values too.

My new office, and Mrs. Friedman, are working out very well; even better, I spend much more time in the lab and have set up a regular work desk there. I am trying very hard to persuade Haruko - I don't know how successfully. We look forward to your return.

Tetsuo Iino will visit us about ten days in September. We should try to see if phase I/II of Salmonella show any obvious difference in their DNA. Of course probably not, but it has to be checked.

We had a smooth, uneventful return; California is very wonderful now. But the time shift still has me awake all night.

As ever,

Farrell
