Dear George - [Dubryshnie]

I thank you for the Kriis book reviews. This looks like a useful job of work in the context where the Russians have excelled - massive descriptive programs. The reviews are good critiques, as well as I can judge without reading the original.

This strikes me as a work that might be of deep interest to oceanographers. I am sure that Ewing and Zobel would be grateful for copies of the condensed translation, and you might consult them & Lloyd on the advisability of recommending this for full translation and publication.

Note: 26 mg/m^3 of bacteria on the average. This is about 100 bugs per drop. Global figures are hard to find.
