

February 23, 1957

Professor J. A. Jenkins
Department of Genetics
University of Edinburgh
Edinburgh 8, Scotland

Dear Jim: 8 1957
To yours of the 15th

Dates and seminar arrangements confirmed. I am enclosing itinerary to allow contact, if necessary, while we are in Europe. But please keep an extra carbon copy of any correspondence which I can pick up in April. I have first asked for the flight reservations for the NY-SF leg, but this long in advance there should be no trouble. I will of course notify of any changes. We should have a good deal to talk about, and much better in conversation than by letter. I will call you the evening of the 3d after I arrive.

As to seminar, I hope interested microbiologists will be notified and welcome. Nevertheless, I will address myself to the audience you indicate.

I am pleased to hear how you are forging ahead. However, there is no need for undue rush on formalities (at least not on my account), so long as our target dates already discussed are kept in sight.

If I could have the 'architectural information' I asked for, it would help me clarify advance thoughts on plans during the next month. I am especially interested to know the height of the window sills (i.e. do the windows conflict with the placement of lab benches) and whether such utility services as compressed air lines and distilled water lines are already available in the Giannini.

Yours sincerely,
Joshua Lederberg