

Interviews: WW

EB

JUN 1 1949

University of Wisconsin
Madison, Wisconsin

Thursday, May 12, 1949

WW calls on Professor Joshua Lederburg.

His small laboratory has been very nicely constructed and equipped, and his little crowd, consisting of one graduate assistant, L.'s wife who is a candidate for the Ph. D., and one student helper, are very busily at work.

From his conversation with L., WW gets a most favorable impression that he is maturing rapidly, that he is not nearly so cocky as he was a year ago, and that he is turning out some first-rate work.