

January 2, 1955

Mr. William H. Freeman
W. H. Freeman and Company
San Francisco

Dear Bill:

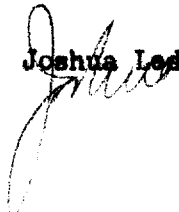

Thank you for the trouble you took in your last letter. I realize that you really could not answer the questions I posed, but I am as sure now as ever that we have a sympathetic outlook on the publication project. We are, therefore, happy to return the contracts with our signatures.

The following comments will be assumed to be understood as conditions of the agreement. While all the business arrangements should be handled with me, as a matter of convenience, "GENETICS AND CHEMOTHERAPY" is a joint enterprise of which, as stated on the chapter outline, Luca (Dr. Cavalli) is the senior author, and should be cited as such. In addition, it should be understood (I assume without any question) that section IX, last sentence, has no application to research articles or reviews in scientific periodicals, nor to the work on "Comparative Genetics" which Sonneborn and I have been discussing with you for some time. ^{or symposia}

Luca's address in Italy is: Dott. Luigi Cavalli-Sforza, Istituto Sieroterapico Milanese, Via Darwin 20, Milano, Italia. However, as stated above, all business communications can be made with me, for my own part, and as agent for him. We have agreed to divide royalties equally. When the time comes, any checks can be written to his order (for his part) and sent to me.

With best wishes,

Yours sincerely,

Joshua Lederberg