Dear Doctor Lederberg,

I appreciate very much the receipt of three reprints on your most interesting genetic studies on Salmonella and Escherichia.

I found with these reprints a typewritten copy on your simple method for isolating individual microbes and underneath a question. My answer would be positively: yes. I do think that any simple modification of the single cell technique is important in order to help the extension of this essential method. We shall be glad to try out ourselves your technique.

With best greetings

Yours very sincerely
