Dr. Joshua Lederberg
Stanford Medical Center
Palo Alto, California.

Dear Dr. Lederberg:

This is a strange request which comes about as a result of Dr. Kornberg's visit with us. I told him that I was interested from the historical standpoint in people who have made important research contributions during their student days. He put you at the head of his list - so I am emboldened to ask if you mind being referred to in an AOA lecture I must give soon at another school. If not, I would very much appreciate a small glossy print of yourself from which a lantern slide can be made as well as a little more specific information than I now possess regarding the contributions you made as a student. It is my understanding that you began the study of medicine but were side-tracked into chemistry because of them.

I apologize for making a nuisance of myself but it is people like you and Kornberg who inspire students.

Sincerely yours,

Thomas Findley, M. D.
Professor and Chairman
