Dear Josh -

I'm writing to ask you a small favor, as you might have guessed.

Have been down here (London) for a few days and have spent a good bit of time at the London School of Tropical Medicine & Hyg.

Here I've met a fellow named Stocker - a medical microbiologist working on agglutinating antigens of typhii etc. etc. - too medical for me!

Anyway - he has been told by the Prof (Chairman) of the Dept. to apply for a Commonwealth fellowship in the U.S. I told him that I'd write to you & get the names of some likely people that he might spent some time with. you know how commonwealths are - only a few months "work" & mostly traveling. He needs 3-4 places to include with the first application papers. He doesn't really know who might be interested in or working on genetic aspects of pathogens. He's admittedly not much of a biochemist - mostly an immunologist and a heck of a fine fellow. So - if you could send me the names of a few good men based on these rather vague descriptive terms I should be most grateful to you. I don't think ~~that~~ he's biochemical enough to do you much good & then there's always space to think of.

Am having a fine time over here & am getting about a good bit. Haven't lost any weight and have averted vitamin C deficiency by eating Brussels sprouts - which I hate. I hope that all is well with you and many thanks for any help that you can give. My regards to Esther. Sincerely, Stan.
