INTRODUCTION.

ITS RISE AND PROGRESS.

A FEW Gentlemen, blessed with benevolent hearts, and liberal dispositions, urged by their feelings, and encouraged by the success of similar Charities (established in the Metropolis and places adjacent) were induced to attempt to institute this Charity.

The original Promoters met on the 29th day of April, 1780, and were soon joined by several friends and humane persons, who continued to meet very frequently, as well to promote Subscriptions as to elect proper Officers, and to form and adopt Regulations, Rules and Orders, for the good government of the Charity.

On the 3d of August, 1780, the Governors conceived that the fruits of their labours were so far ripened, that they ought to diffuse them among the objects of their Care. They therefore resolved that this Dispensary should be opened on the then 12th instant.

In the first six months, 685 poor, afflicted, worthy objects were cured or received relief.

PRESENT STATE.

From the institution to this time, 54,563 distressed fellow-creatures have enjoyed the advantages resulting from this benevolent establishment, 52,769 of whom, to their great comfort, and to the happiness of their families, and benefit of the publick, have experienced the eminent abilities, unremitting assiduity, and tender care, of the Gentlemen of the Faculty engaged in this Charity; either by receiving a perfect cure, or the utmost relief that medicine or chirurgical operations could bestow.

There are 532 unfortunate beings now under Cure.

The Physicians and Surgeon have visited 15,410 Patients at their own habitations.

UTILITY.

The very great number of applications, most manifestly demonstrate the necessity of this undertaking, and point out, that proper objects abound within the limits of it.

The most distinguished writers agree, that the wealth of nations springs from the production of labour; labour; surely, then, poor industrious labourers have a just claim to, and merit the care and assistance, not only of the affluent, but of all degrees not pinched with want.

Hospitals are certainly very useful establishments, and real public benefits; yet their most sanguine supporters cannot deny, that in several instances Dispensaries are pre-eminent; and very particularly so, on account of the afflicted being visited at their own habitations. For admitting that Nurses at Hospitals are vigilant and humane, yet they cannot possess or impart the sympathetic feelings, or anxious care, of an affectionate Husband or Wife, a tender Parent or Child; which must undoubtedly afford a considerable comfort to, and, in some degree, soften the pangs of, the unfortunate diseased.—Hospitals are also much less salutary than Dispensaries in this respect; at Hospitals, Patients are admitted once a Week only; but, at Dispensaries, the indisposed are immediately assisted,

Many other and great benefits are communicated to the objects of this charity, which are so obvious, that an enumeration of them seems not only unnecessary, but might be deemed tedious.

The applications for the relief of poor, distressed, and deserving objects, so far exceed the means arising from the present subscriptions, that the benefits of the charity cannot, at present, be extended to all of them; the Governors therefore hope for, and solicit the humane and generous assistance of their Friends and Neighbours, to extend the cheering Relief to Misery. It is in their power to crown the endeavours, and to gratify the hopes and wishes of the Governors, by timely, though small subscriptions; and when an individual considers that he can, by the payment of a single Guinea annually, oblige many, relieve a number, do so much public good, and indulge his own humane feelings, he surely will readily and cheerfully contribute his mite, and press to lend farther assistance to so benevolent a purpose.

Persons subscribing early to Charities, receive a satisfaction that others cannot enjoy; for early subscriptions tend to render Charities so stable, that, through their means, comfort may be rendered to the unhappy for ages to come.

Many cogent reasons might be urged, much persuasive language used, and many weighty arguments stated, to procure subscriptions; but it is hoped, that private Good, and public Utility, will supersede the necessity of entering into the matter more at large.

This Charity is much indebted to several eminent Divines, who have delivered Sermons in favour of it, and thereby raised considerable sums towards its support.
